Advertising Advertising Getty Images / Kirstin Sinclair Summer Shorts is necessary, but finding the right pair to flatter your figure and work with your body type is not always easy. Let's be honest: Sometimes shorts can be the worst. Do not worry! We are here to help with a quick, down and dirty guide to finding the best shorts for your body shape to hide the parts you want to hide and show off your best assets. (Hey, some of us really love our knees and calves!) Medium-length shorts from the end of the Earth. Lands' End Shorts with medium leg length as this pair of Lands' End is universally flattering. They are called different things - walk shorts, day shorts, golf shorts, classic shorts, etc. - but are best recognized by dry land about 7 or 8 inches. Unlike knee-length shorts that cut your leg in half visually, short lengths make your feet look longer while still covering problem areas like the upper thigh. For the most flattering look, keep fullness under control (thin leg shorts will make your legs look slimmer, too.) knee-length shorts. Nordstrom.com If you're feeling self-conscious about your hips or even a derriere, a large pair of slimming, leg-lengthening Bermuda shorts are a great option. You can easily cover the problem area (or just create a very polished, professional look) with this of Not Your Daughter Jeans Bermuda shorts that hit the knee and slightly high waist. While knee-length shorts can make short legs look shorter, it's easy to balance it with a pair of wedges for extra leg length. Also, look for slim cut shorts - these denim shorts are perfect - to give your legs a bigger, slimmer look (too full of shorts are more like gauchos at this length and not flattering.) Theory/Shopbop.com you want to give your short legs a little more length? Try rocking a pair-you guessed short shorts. A 5-inch inseam or so is a great place to start, any shorter than that, and you run the risk of showing too much (if you ask us). We recommend these smooth cuff shorts from the theory. Four or 5 inch-inseam shorts long enough to give some upper leg cover, but short enough to lengthen the leg. Plus-size bermuda. Nordstrom.com If you have a lot of curves, the longer short is the most forgiving. Curvy girls aren't the only ones who look great in the shorter one. These almost knee-length shorts are dressier look and are perfect for shopping, traveling, even career if your workplace allows them. James Jeans / Shopbop.com Lucky, Happy Girl! If you are naturally tall and thin but want to break down long, thin lines-go with shorts that have cuffs or Function. (Bonus: With naturally thin and long legs, you can rock shorter inseam without looking too scandalous.) You get the maximum use from that have convertible lengths as well as they make even stick thin legs look meandering.
